

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is outrageous. The airwaves belong to the people, and any user of them needs to keep the interests of the people at the forefront of any decision. With more large companies gaining control of greater percentages of our citizen's airwaves, the diversity of programming is diminished. The focus of the company becomes profit, not what's best for the public. Any blatantly biased program should be balanced with another program of opposing views, or the program shouldn't be shown at all.

Sinclair's choice to show the anti-Kerry documentary is not about public good, but about undermining the challenger to the Presidency for the sake of profitable gain. Leave the politics to the politicians, and the journalism, if you can call it that, to the broadcasting companies. Thank you.
